MARIANNE ADAIMI

Vice President

Lebanese-German University (LGU)

The history of LGU dates back 40 years to when the Lebanese-German Association for the Promotion of Culture, an NGO established by Lebanese and German nationals, created a cultural center, a school and high school, and a technical institute that applied the German system, methodology, and work ethic. In 2007, we founded the LGU and have expanded its programs ever since to cover a varied range of majors. Our latest addition was a BA for the study of the German language and teaching German as a foreign language in collaboration with the Goethe Institute, due to high demand for professionals in this field in Lebanon. Through our German approach toward education we push students to work whilst studying so they can get practical expertise. We also teach German to all our students, as well as practices typical of the German educational system, such as fostering analytical thinking, interactive teaching methods, interpersonal trust, and an overall friendly environment to study.
